ABOUT JEA

The Journalism Education Association Inc., is the only independent national scholastic journalism organization for teachers and advisers.

Founded in 1924, JEA is a volunteer organization. Members of the Board of Directors, including the officers, are current or retired journalism teachers who have obtained their positions through national membership elections.

The headquarters office, located at Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kansas, is maintained as a clearinghouse for JEA members and programs, and provides essential office services. It also houses the JEA Bookstore and membership records.

Among JEA's 2,700 members are journalism teachers and media advisers, media professionals, press associations, adviser organizations, libraries, yearbook companies, newspapers, broadcast operations and departments of journalism and mass communications.

State adviser organizations are encouraged to affiliate with JEA. State affiliates can receive rebates for individual memberships to JEA which are submitted by their state organization. Press associations, libraries, yearbook companies, newspapers, broadcast or online media and collegiate departments of journalism are all offered institutional memberships.

The organization has much to offer those interested in journalism education. The annual dues include publications, discount rates on national conventions and workshops, books at discounted prices and more.

MISSION

Communication: Journalism Education Today provides educational perspectives to JEA members on a wide variety of topics, such as teaching/advising issues, scholastic media strategy, pedagogical updates, current journalism research and other professional and technological concerns.

TARGET AUDIENCE

High school journalism educators make up the majority of the 2,700 members, from the newest to the most experienced, of the national Journalism Education Association. A secondary audience includes professionals — college librarians (more than 200 library subscriptions), yearbook printing companies, college journalism education leaders, state and regional association directors.

CONTENT

Communication: Journalism Education Today promotes lifelong professional learning as the norm and as the expectation for all journalism teachers/advisers, from the newest to the most experienced.

The quarterly JEA magazine, which is 32 to 48 pages, presents articles and packages about reporting, writing, editing, photography, design, typography, trends, advertising, fundraising, public relations and ethical standards as well as articles and packages about technology and pedagogy pertinent for journalism educators. Editors seek articles that value originality, thorough research, knowledgeable sources, fact checking and Associated Press style — all in ways that speak to journalism advisers.

To serve multiple readers and to present a wide range of content, each issue showcases an individual pattern. Usually there is diverse subject matter. Occasionally, an issue highlights an in-depth consideration that builds on current journalism needs or on JEA activities or programs. Other presentations present personal commentary, photography or page galleries, original educational exercises or feature shorts highlighting technical innovations.

CONTRIBUTORS

JEA members and other journalism professionals may submit original articles and packages as well as photographs and other visuals that advance magazine goals, as described above. Always the goal for writing is a length that is appropriate for the subject and/or the package. Articles are often 1,500 to 3,500 words, but they may be shorter or longer if the subject requires a special length to achieve effective communication. Packages with multiple stories and visuals are also a way to present diverse perspectives and to focus on complex issues.

Writers are encouraged to present new perspectives on subjects that have journalism education appeal. Writers may include quotations from authoritative or pertinent sources, such as professional journalists (broadcasters, photographers, writers, designers, and the like), students, advisers, administrators or reputable experts. All copyrighted material and other sources must be properly cited.

BIOGRAPHY

Each author is responsible for providing the editor with a color head-and-shoulders photograph of him/herself, a short biography (maximum, 100 words) and contact information (mailing address, email address and phone number[s]). Each author will receive two copies of the finished publication.

Queries?

I'd love to write an article for C:JET, but I've never written for a national magazine before. What should I know?

We love to work with new authors. Over the past few years, we've had hundreds of different contributors to the magazine. Know that our standards are high. We'll work with you to produce a quality article or series of articles. Bounce your idea off other advisers. Solicit input on the JEAHELP email distribution list. Get your students to write sidebars. Don't hesitate to submit a draft of a work in progress. And, along the way, always think about related artwork. Remember, all submissions for C:JET should be original material, not material already printed in another publication.

What should I write?

How do I know what's a good topic?

Think about what you like to write about or what special things you've done with your students that have been successful. Look through past issues of the magazine and see what we've had lately.

What about peer-reviewed articles?

How do I submit an article for peer review as a tenured or tenure-track professor?

Communication: Journalism Education Today has brought back a peer-reviewed section this fall. The peer-reviewed section includes research that quantifies trends, documents theories, identifies characteristics and disseminates information for and about scholastic media and advising.

C:JET prints first-time material only. Articles submitted to other journals for publication may be simultaneously submitted to C:JET. However, if accepted to C:JET, other submissions must be withdrawn. Authors will be notified within 30 days whether refereed submissions have been accepted.

If accepted, the author will be asked to produce supplementary materials, possibly including handouts and other material for classroom use.

The manuscript should be no more than 4,000 words long (excluding tables, charts, graphs, and endnotes). An abstract of no more than 100 words must accompany each submission. Author identification should appear only on the title page and should include academic rank or professional title, applicable university, departmental affiliation and a short, 2-5 sentence bio.

Use endnotes, following AEJMC style. Do not use in-text references, i.e., (Weston, 1972). Do not use op. cit., ibid., or bc. cit.

Each manuscript should be submitted as an attachment to the editor, Bradley Wilson, Ph.D., (bradleywilson08@gmail.com). Manuscripts should be submitted in Microsoft Word format and double-spaced.

Refereed articles that are rejected may be resubmitted for the nonrefereed section of C:JET and will be considered if appropriate.

Contract FOR ADVERTISING

YES, I'd like to take this opportunity to reach thousands of the top journalism educators in the nation by advertising in Communication: Journalism Education Today. Advertising rates listed on the Rate Card and Contract are for camera-ready ads submitted electronically. All ads must be submitted as high-resolution PDF documents with crop marks indicated for bleeds. All additional art, photography, or unusually time-consuming work will be charged at the rates below on the contract. No ad placement will be guaranteed. However, placement will be granted, if possible, when requested. All ads must be paid in advance. JEA will provide advertisers with two copies of each publication in which their ad runs. Additional copies are $5 each.
